TUESDAY, JULY 5, 1859

This number of our paper was printed on Saturday evening, in order to allow the boys in the office to enjoy the glorious Fourth, and of course is not up with the news of the day. It has become a custom with newspapers to take holiday on the anniversary of the nation's independence, and we have followed the fashion.

Letter from John M. Harlan.
FRANKFORT, June 29, 1859.

To the Editor of the Louisville Democrat:

In the Daily Louisville Democrat of this day's date I observe the following paragraph:
"It appears from the Yeoman that Mr. Harlan, the Opposition candidate for Congress in the Eighth District, wrote a letter to the New Albany Tribune advocating the election of Morton, Black Republican, over Willard, in the gubernatorial contest. The Yeoman publishes the letter."

As your paper has a large circulation in the various counties composing this Congressional District, I desire to state through its columns that I am not the author of the letter referred to, or any other letter advocating the election of Morton over Willard.

I was never consulted in reference to, nor did I ever indorse or approve the writing of any such letter. I was not informed that such a letter would be written, nor that it had been written until some weeks after it was published in the Yeoman, which was near the close of the Presidential canvass of 1856. On the day the letter bears date, (September 12, 1856,) I addressed a large crowd in Williamsburg, Whitley county, Kentucky, in favor of the election of Fillmore and Donnie.

Will the Democrat as well as the Yeoman do me the favor to publish this card?

Your obedient servant,

JOHN M. HARLAN.

We publish the above, which came to us in an indirect way, to oblige Mr. Harlan. As he has requested us to publish it, a word of comment may not be out of place. We make no objection to the style or matter of this communication, but we must be allowed to state that we think it is given to the world at a remarkably late period. About three years ago the Yeoman first copied the famous Morton letter sent from this place to Mr. Gregg, editor of the New Albany (Ind.) Tribune, and relying upon the statement of the gentleman to whom it was addressed that it was the production of "a Fillmore Elector in the State of Kentucky," we called upon John Harlan to come forward and deny that he wrote it.

He failed to do so in a public manner, so far as we are informed, and Mr. Gregg never, so far as we have heard, exonerated Gen. Harlan from the authorship of the letter, although the discussion upon the subject between the two newspapers at this place must have met his eye at the time, and although Mr. Harlan's organ expressed the belief, if not the wish, that he would make the correction. Mr. Gregg is now dead. To do justice to all parties, it is proper to state that shortly after the first publication of the Morton letter in the Yeoman, Mr. Harlan's brother, Col. W. L. Harlan, published a short card, claiming the authorship of the letter for himself; but Gen. John Harlan, as we infer, did not then think his supposed connection with a document advocating the election of Morton over Willard of sufficient importance to demand a denial over his own signature. If this remarkable conduct argues a change in the public sentiment upon charges of affiliation and sympathy with the Northern Black Republican party, we are glad to see it, and we cheerfully give Mr. Harlan the use of our columns to set himself right before the public. But he is remarkably slow in repudiating Mortimerism.

Assuming that Col. Wm. Harlan wrote the Morton letter, we would like to know how the fact stated in that letter, that all the able men of Frankfort concurred in the sentiments expressed by the writer can be reconciled with the statements made in the communication at the head of these remarks. We admit that it can be done by supposing Gen. Harlan not to be of the number of able men at this place; yet he was making American speeches throughout the country as Assistant Elector for the State at large. We are willing to take Mr. Harlan's statement upon matters of a personal character concerning himself, from the respect we entertain for him as a gentleman, but certainly it was very natural to conclude that his brother, when he claimed the indorsement of his sentiments by the able men of this place, included in the number the prominent members of his own family.

The members of the Democratic National Convention have agreed upon the 2d of June, 1860, as the day for the meeting of the National Convention at Charleston to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President.

Garrett Davis on Old-Line Whigs.

We have heretofore published the correspondence between Simms and Davis, and now lay before our readers the entire article out of which the difficulty grew, as we find it in several of our Opposition exchanges. It will be seen, from a perusal, that Mr. Davis was very severe upon old-line Whigs generally, as well as upon Capt. Simms:

CAPT. SIMMS AS A WHIG.—Capt. Simms is a very pious and courteous gentleman, of fair talents and high aspirations; who has always appraised himself a little above his full value. He was first a candidate for the house of the State Legislature in this county, in 1846. He was then a very decided and conservative Whig, and took strong ground against submitting to the people the question, whether a convention should be called to revise the constitution of the State. He was defeated. In 1849 he again became a candidate for the same place, and openly avowed his adherence to Whig principles and measures, and indeed assumed to be one of their champions. He was elected, and at the ensuing session was made chairman of the House committee on "Federal Relations." During the session he never wavered in his support of Whig doctrine and measures, and his fidelity to them was above suspicion. In 1849, he aspired to represent this Senatorial district in the Legislature, and he importunately sought the Whig nomination for the place. The name of Capt. John Cunningham, a soldier of the war of 1812, a much older man, was presented for the same nomination. Not from any purpose to slight, or under-rate Capt. Simms, the Whigs of the county manifested a prompt and decided preference for the "war-worn veteran." Then, for the first time, did the Capt. manifest discontent, not with Whigism or the Whig party, but with that large majority of Whigs in Bourbon county which had preferred Capt. Cunningham to himself; and for no other known cause, he suspended friendly relations with sundry gentlemen, between whom and himself the most courteous terms had previously subsisted.

In 1853, the Whigs of the district held a convention to nominate a candidate in opposition to John C. Breckinridge, who was a candidate for re-election, and in this we think his courage got the better of his discretion, for though I am far from believing Mr. Breckinridge to be the great man which his friends proclaim him, yet I thought, and I still think, he would have given our Capt. a terrible overthrow. So thought the convention. Capt. Simms became eager and importunate for nomination, and he had been, for any previous one. He strongly solicited many Whigs personally for their support. He importuned delegates to attend the convention and to work for him, and urged his claims upon it, and some of them good naturedly promised him to do so, and they faithfully redeemed that promise. But the convention thought it most wise not then to nominate Capt. Simms, and they fairly elected, by a large majority, was nominated over him. Capt. Simms' honor, his fidelity to his party and the principles which he professed, and also to the political and personal friends whom he had prevailed to go into convention and urge his nomination, all required him to support and vote for the nominee; for he and his friends were implicitly, but in the strongest manner, pledged that he should. Even among blacklegs, if one put up his stake intending to take all if he win, he would not be tolerated by that class of gentry, much less by the honest part of the world outside of it, to snatch up his stake. I profess a sincere personal respect for Capt. Simms, which I would not profess if I did not feel; and both my personal and political regard for him caused me to regret that he did not, and that he could not, be induced to vote for Gov. Letcher. I suppose that Capt. Simms then became fully satisfied that his ambitious hopes would not soon be realized in the party which he belonged, and he then silently determined to go over to the camp of that enemy against whom he had waged his political warfare, and fight for higher pay than he was receiving from those who were struggling to bring the principles which he professed into the ascendant. Capt. Simms did not vote between Morehead and Clark, but in the ensuing campaign he went over to the enemy, horse foot and dragons, took the field for Buchanan, and then became Editor of the "Flag."

CAPT. SIMMS REVERENCES THE MEMORY OF HENRY CLAY.—Capt. Simms, in his speech on Thursday last, declared that there lived no man, who held the services, the character, and the memory of Mr. Clay in greater regard and reverence than he did. Linn Boyd, a hoary old Locofoco, was one of the bitterest traducers and revilers of Mr. Clay up to the time of his last sickness and death. In 1844, Boyd was for last of the champions of the great statesman of Ashland, who revived and reiterated in Congress the state charge against him of bargain, sale and corruption in the election of John Q. Adams to the Presidency. Yet Capt. Simms voluntarily withdrew his name as a competitor of Boyd for the Democratic nomination for Lieut. Governor, and is now one of his supporters for that office.

CAPT. SIMMS ON KNOW-NOTHING.—Captain Simms denounced the Know-Nothing party, as he termed it, and its nomination of A. K. Marshall for Congress. Has the Captain any friend "new or old" who doubts that if the Know-Nothing Convention had tendered that nomination to him, on condition that he should become a member of that order, that the Captain would have accepted the terms in doubt and have become a follower of "Sam." If there be such a friend he is a green one.

CAPT. SIMMS AND THE OLD LINE WHIGS.—Captain Simms said in his speech in Paris, that he was supported by as good and true old-line Whigs as there were in the county, and in a subsequent part of it, that he had been a Whig on principle. Benedict Arnold signified his support of the American Whig cause in the Revolutionary War on Lake Champlain, before the walls of Quebec, and on the plains of Saratoga. He afterwards offered to sell the American army posted at West Point to King George the III, and then went over to the enemy. There were good old-line Whigs who voted for Buchanan, and they did not swallow the Cincinnati Democratic platform—a platform that reiterates every former Democratic heresy and measure which the old-line Whigs had opposed for a generation, and it fulminates the usual Democratic denunciation against every old Whig principle and measure. The Captain and the old-line Whigs who carry the Cincinnati platform in their graves and support him, are such Whigs as Arnold was after he had fled to the British camp.

THE STATE GOVERNMENT—ITS IMPORTANCE.—One error with all political parties in Kentucky is, that they give an undue importance to the administration of the government of the United States over the government of this State. It is of more importance to the people of this State to have their government well administered than even to have a good administration of the United States government. There are a few Old-Line Whigs who would not concede that the administration of the government of Kentucky, on the old right and disorganizing principles, would be a greater boon to the people of this State than have the administration of P. K. or Pierce, or even Buchanan. One would suppose that with every true Old-Line Whig, the first political desire would be to have a good and true Old-Line Whig Governor of the State. Well, here is Joshua F. Bell, just such a Whig, agreeing with Capt. Simms, and the Louisville Democrat, and also in opposition to the "Know-Nothing" organization. Who doubts that if a desire for office had never entered into, and was not now in the heart of Capt. Simms, that he would be for the "Old Line Whig" Joshua F. Bell, and against the woolly dog Locofoco, Beriah Magoffin?

THE KENTUCKY DEMOCRACY AND SQUATTER SOVEREIGNTY.—Capt. Simms avowed that he came disaffected with the Whig party and afterwards with the American party, because of their inclination to fraternize with the free-soilers of the North who were against protecting slavery. Van Buren, Chase, Sumner, King, Wilmot, and a legion of the free soil leaders, were original Democrats. The whole Democratic party of the free States are now giving slavery in the Territories to the unfriendly legislation of squatters, and non-intervention in Congress; and yet Capt. Simms hitches himself on to that party. The Democratic leaders and organs in Kentucky know that the Democratic party cannot hold possession of the U. S. government, and all its offices, and its continually plundered treasury, without the alliance of the non-intervention squatter seignior party of the free States, and all their profligate and disgusting twisting and wriggling throughout the State at this time, is to sacrifice much of the proper protection to slave property as well as enable them to hold alliance with their free soil allies, and yet not drive off the mass of their party at home. Never was there a more venal surrender of principle.

In Kentucky, heretofore, everybody was for protecting slave property in the Territories, and such is yet the sentiment and determination of the great mass of the people. But the people on the other side of the Ohio river occupy the opposite position, and the Buchanan leaders of Kentucky are attempting to straddle that river, and to hold one foot on the pro-slavery ground of their own State, and to plant the other upon the free-soil ground of the free States. Their object is to gull the public, and to continue an unprincipled combination with the free-soilers to enable them to divide between themselves for the future, as they heretofore have done, the offices, jobs, contracts, and treasury of the United States.

A CHANCE FOR THE FAITHFUL.

All who believe that Bell or Harlan have the ghost of a chance are invited to face the music!

We are authorized to propose the following bets to any of the Opposition in this latitude who have the requisite amount of means, faith, and pluck to accept them, viz:

$10 on each Congressional district in Kentucky separately—that Magoffin's majorities exceed those of Buchanan, and that Bell's majorities fall short of those of Fillmore.
$50 that Magoffin is elected Governor.
$50 that Magoffin gets 2,500 majority.
$50 that Magoffin gets 5,000 majority.
$30 that Magoffin gets 7,000 majority.
$20 that Magoffin gets 10,000 majority.

Also,

$70 that Simms beats Harlan in this district.

$20 that Simms beats Harlan and Trabue together.

$10 that Trabue gets more votes than Harlan.

All the foregoing bets to be taken together, and in case either of the parties named should not run the race out, the bet in reference to him is drawn.

The True Doctrine.

The voters of Kentucky have not forgotten that Mr. Clay, from the Committee of Thirteen in the United States Senate, made a report on the 8th day of May, 1850, in which he uses the following expressive and truthful words:

"The true principle which ought to regulate the action of Congress in forming Territorial governments for each newly-acquired domain is to regard from all legislation on the subject of slavery in the Territory acquired, so long as it retains the Territorial form of government, leaving to the people of such Territory, when they have attained to a condition which entitles them to admission as a State, to decide for themselves the question of the allowance of prohibition of domestic slavery."

The doctrine enunciated in the above is the doctrine in which the Democracy of Kentucky have ever believed, and goes to prove conclusively that if Mr. Clay were living at the present day, he would be a Democrat. It is the doctrine of the Constitution, of common sense, and common justice, and harmonizes in every particular with the Democratic Platform.

[For the Yeoman.]
BURNSVILLE, KY., June 24, 1859.

EDITOR YEOMAN: The good old doctrines and principles advocated by the Democratic party are steadily and constantly progressing in the Fourth District; we can stand inflexibly erect upon the platform of principles laid down by our fathers; a platform based upon the Federal Constitution, extending the time-honored doctrine of "equal rights" to every part of our glorious confederacy, and necessary to the existence and maintenance of our nationality. The Democratic party has ever held it as one of the cardinal principles in its political creed "that the people had the capacity to govern themselves;" that they were not wanting in either virtue or intelligence—thus believing, and thus holding, they have ever felt the necessity of coming before them with pure principles and correct practical theories, in order to receive their approbation and support.

There has ever been a party in the nation in opposition to the Democratic party; that party has advocated many and varied doctrines, assumed many street-sounding names, and stood upon various and widely conflicting platforms. They (with one solitary exception, which was the old Whig party) seem to have gone upon the notion that the people were incapable of governing themselves intelligently; that they could best accomplish their purposes, and obtain possession and power in the land, by artful and cunning devices, deep and sagacious intrigues, and by clothing their destructive heresies with high-sounding names, and delusive titles.

It is amusing to trace these worthies through their various amblings and twistings in search of office and the genial sunlight of popular favor. At one time we have them fearing the Pope, and trembling at the dangers which threaten our institutions from foreigners and foreign influence. We find them in opposition to the repeal of that odious and unconstitutional Missouri Compromise restriction. At another, we find them indorsing the principles of non-intervention, and pledging themselves to stand by the existing laws upon the slavery question. At one time we have them pretermittin the expression of opinion upon the power of Congress to legislate upon slavery in the Territories, but giving an opinion that if such power belonged to Congress it ought not to be exercised. We find them now abandoning all those opinions and doctrines with a willow suppleness characteristic of insincerity, and reckless repudiation of principles and measures, to suit the times, and their obscure notions of what would be most popular, and what would best win before the people. I cannot refrain here from giving you a single instance of the facility with which they change their opinions, which occurred in my own county. On the 10th day of January last, the Opposition party in Cumberland county held a county meeting for the purpose of sending delegates to the convention to assemble in Louisville the 22d of February following, to nominate candidates for their State ticket. In that meeting they passed a preamble and sundry resolutions, which they had published in the Louisville Journal, which preamble was as follows:

"At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the opposition to sectionalism, in the court-house, this place, on Monday, January the 10th, 1859, T. C. Wiley was called to the Chair. On motion of Dr. D. R. Haggard, M. H. Owsley, James Rouseau, Dr. Jas. Cheek, Dr. R. M. Alexander, and David Williams, were appointed a committee to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting, who, after retiring and consulting, reported the following, which were unanimously adopted."

After several resolutions condemnatory of the administration of Mr. Buchanan, they came to give their opinion upon the great slavery question, which is contained in the following resolution:

Resolved, That Congress has no right to legislate on the question of slavery in the State or Territory wherein it does now, or may hereafter exist, but the power to control it belongs to the bona fide citizens, and not merely residents of the Territories and States.

There we have the opinion expressed, in unmistakable and unequivocal terms, that Congress has no power to legislate upon the subject of slavery either in the State or Territories where it now exists or may hereafter exist. We have here a positive assertion that the power to control the question vests in the bona fide citizens of the States or Territories. Such was the opinion of the Opposition party of Cumberland county upon the 10th day of last January, as expressed in these resolutions. We find by reference to their preamble that the meeting was large and enthusiastic; we also find from the preamble that the resolutions offered by the committee were unanimously adopted; no member of the Opposition present at that meeting but who indorsed and adopted that resolution, or its passage could not have been unanimous. We find by reference to the preamble that our distinguished fellow-citizen, Dr. Haggard, now the Opposition candidate for President of the Board of Internal Improvement, was present in that meeting, making motions and participating in the proceedings. We are led then, irresistibly, to the conclusion that those resolutions, at that time, contained a just and correct exposition of his political faith. On the 10th day of January last, our distinguished fellow citizen held that Congress had no right to legislate upon the subject of slavery in the Territories. At that time he believed that the power to control it belonged to the people, or bona fide citizens of the Territory. I allude to Dr. Haggard because he is a candidate upon the State ticket, and it is proper for the people to know how he then stood, and how he now stands, upon this most important and exciting question. Alas! for human opinions—how subject to change, mutation, and alteration. The Doctor now thinks Congress has the power to legislate upon the question in the Territories, and advocates the passage of a slave code by Congress, protecting slavery in the Territories. He does not now believe, as he did upon the 10th of January, that the power to control it belongs to the people, or the bona fide citizens of the Territory, but is advocating the passage of a slave code by Congress controlling the people or bona fide citizens? What a beautiful consistency! I have often been amused at the ease with which a circus rider would change horses whilst the horses were not far speed, but the most expert showmen are not more up to quick changes, and lofty sumo results than are the Opposition leaders in Kentucky. They are, also, well versed in slang, slander, and vituperation.

They pour out their wrath and bitterness in great profusion upon every thing, and every body, that comes in their road to preferment. The big leaders, little leaders, and many of the privates, seem to have particular relish for this patriotic exercise. They look upon Democracy as the bane of the nation, and themselves as the benefactor of the people, and Democratic principles have been honored and true by the people, and they, with itching palms and disappointed ambition, have been thrust aside. These worthies think Democrats are of course very corrupt, dishonest, profligate, and untrue generally to the interest of the people. They very modestly want the people to turn the Democrats out of power and put them in. (Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth,) without a theory of government to point to as their political creed; without nationality, without a past, or prospect for a future, it is indeed a reasonable and modest request to turn the Democrats out of office and let them fill the places occupied by them.

All these leaders, as well as the small fry, are particularly exercised about Congressional protection. They feel sure that the Democrats are about to prove untrue to the South and the constitution, by failing to pass a slave code for the Territories. And they rear, rant, fume, fret, and eat fire, until one would be led to conclude that their political stomachs were lined with adamant. They imagine they have a clap-net well baited into which the poor ignorant people will surely go; a fast-going hobby on which every mother's son of them will ride into office; but, as usual, they will be mistaken. The people have intelligence, nationality, patriotism—they know that a re-opening of the slavery agitation in Congress can eventuate in no good to the South, and will seriously imperil the Union. They have fresh in their memories the severe trials and serious dangers we have passed through in other days on account of this same slavery agitation in Congress. They remember in those dark days how the whining tide of sectionalism and fanaticism, beat with unabated fury against the old ship of State, threatening to bury her forever beneath their merciless waves; and how great "Harry of the West," in the evening of his life, dispelled those threatening dangers, and gave to a distracted nation peace and hope. They remember how the hearts of all true lovers of their country turned with gratitude towards Kentucky's proud son for his signal services in procuring the settlement of that dangerous and distracting question. Amidst a long line of distinguished public services, the passage of the compromise measures of 1850, and his labors in their behalf, was considered the greatest act of his life. And they remember that compromise was effected upon the just and honorable principle of non-intervention, a principle which has ever met with the approval of the Democracy, and upon which to-day they stand. But I must close. More anon.

I remain yours, &c., REMUS.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—A special dispatch from New Orleans to the Charleston Courier, dated 29th ult., says that on the 11th, Minister McLane addressed a remonstrance to Miramon's Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the name of President Buchanan, expressing his great indignation of the withdrawal of the exequators from the American Consuls, and the murder of peaceful American citizens by Mexican soldiers at Acapulco. The massacre is characterized as a violation of national rights and treaty stipulations, and Miramon is warned that it will be remembered and redressed by the United States. The ship-of-war Saratoga has returned from Vera Cruz to Tampico.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Captain Van Vleet, United States Assistant Quartermaster, has submitted to the War Department a reply to the charges recently preferred against him for alleged misconduct in connection with the purchase of mules for the army, and the Secretary of War, after mature deliberation of same, has decided that the explanation and testimony tendered by the Postmaster General has ordered of G. F. Nesbit, of New York, contractor, one million stamped envelopes, with the new self-sealing improvement. They will be furnished to the public at five cents per hundred more than are charged at the present rate.

The statement contained in a letter from Floyd, and extensively published, charging the Secretary of War with being personally interested in the contracts with Holiday and others, for supplying flour to the troops in Utah, is wholly destitute of truth. The arrangement for this service was made in the regular course of business after advertisement, with the proper officers, by which he contracted with the former was made, that at least one hundred thousand dollars are saved to the government.

It is rumored that W. E. Riley, Esq., of Springfield, has announced himself as the Opposition candidate for Congress in this district.—Bardonia Gazette.
